Superintendent Davidson and Judge Mack Discuss Child Conservation.

Physical defects, such as defective eyesight or hearing and adenoid growths, especially the latter, constitute the dargest factor in making juvenile delinquents and ultimate criminals, according to statements made by Judge Julian W. Mack and Dr. William M. Davidson at the thirteenth annual meeting of the Associated Charities of District at Rauscher's last night, by Mme, Dina Pughlia. the general subject being "The Conservation of the Child,"

Both speakers agreed that adenoids are a most dangerous deformity or defect in a child, and that they often point the way to the penitentiary. They both urged more rigid medical inspection of school children, particularly along the line of preventing the adenoid growths from assuming a serious condi-

Dr. Davidson, Superintendent Schools, declared that the physical education of the child is just as important as the mental training, as without the former the latter is often impossi-ble. The moral uplift of the school children should also be given attention, he added, as the good citizen will ma-ture from the healthy and upright child.

Physical Education.

"Physical education is one of the great scholastic problems of the day," said Dr. Davidson. "Our schools in the District of Columbia have recognized the importance of the healthy child, and already certain methods have been adopted to train the body as well as the mind. We have schools for abnormal children, but often the pupil can be saved from irreparable injury by the early discovery of some tendency that can be remedied.

"One of my most urgent recommendations will be that adequate provision be made for the children physically unfit to begin studies, this to include a most careful examination of the prospective pupils by competent physiprospective pupils by competent physicians."

Judge Mack, who is president of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, former judge of the Chicago Juvenile Court, and at present a member of the Ceurt of Commerce bench, spoke on the "conservation of the child from the viewpoint of prevention of juvenile delinquency."

"The penitentiary and adenoids are connected by almost a direct road," declared Judge Mack, "Nearly every juvenile offender has some physical or mental deficiency and usually the mental defect can be traced to physical weakness."

The speaker asserted that the juvenile court is one of the greatest legal discoveries of the age, its value in conserving the child being emphasized most conspiciously although the institution is only a dezen years old. He said a new note in jurisprudence was struck when the juvenile court theory was advanced.

Rev. Mr. Smith Presides.

The Rev. Roland Cotton Smith, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, presided at the meeting, and introduced the two speakers. The Rev. William J. Kerby delivered invocation, and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Abram tion was pronounced by the Rev. Abram Simon.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were: Corcoran Thom, president; the Rev. R. C. Smith, Mgr. William T. Russell, the Rev. J. H. Brandford, and I. L. Blout, vice preridents, and John Joy Edson. The board of management elected are: William H. Baldwin, Col. Archibald Hopkins, Dr. George M. Kober, Miss Florence P. Spofford and Admiral Seaton Schroeder.

The annual reports submitted showed that individual contributions for the year amounted to $1,015, there being 1.436 contributors. During the year 1.454 families were given relief.

Airs View on Recall In His Annual Report

Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell went out of his official way in his annual report, to give his opinion on the recall of judges. The Comptroller gave his opinion on a political question in discussing the dismissal of accounting officials by su-periors. He held that Federal officials should not be invested with the power to dismiss accounting officers who pass on their expenditures of public moneys. Mr. Tracewell says this authority is "only another expression of the popular fallacy now affecting a considerable part of our people known as the recall of judges."

night, Saturday matinee and night, Henry W. Savage will present Giacomo Puccini's grand opera, "The Girl of the Golden West," in English. This opera, which was sung in Italian at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, last on, is essentially an American subject, founded on David Belasco's drama of California. The Savage cast is in every sense a grand opera organization. The roles are sung by three sets of principals. On Friday night the singers of the chief roles will be as follows: Minnie, Mme. When the curtain goes down on the first act of "The Witness for the Defense," in which Miss Ethel Barrymore will appear at the New National Theater next week, it leaves a man raving in ungovernable fury and threatening violence to his wife, who has a gun in her hand. The man is a brute. The woman's life with him has been degradation and physical torture.

When bearing such action is Delly Todd, the beautiful Philadelphia Juakers who made so much of American history, and whose beauty was the inspiration for the fire and zeal of many speeches in Congress when that body was assembling in the Quaker City. The story treats of the difficulty Dolly Todd encounters in discovering just where she is going to place the final custody of her daintily feminine hearting the hand of Aaron Burr, the Vivo President, or James Madison, the Secretary of State and afterward President.

If she has shot him, it would, of course, judging from what has gone before, have been an act of self-defense. Indeed, it is hardly possible to suppose she has not shot him, for it evidently was a case of one life or another, as the man had a revolver in his pocket, and in his rage must have killed the woman if she had not killed him. And, so the audience is left to speculate.

With this element of suspense "The Witness for the Defense" begins, developing the play.
